

IFDM - Maastricht

Statement 1

- For return to work are individual level factors more important than organization level factors, which in turn are more important than macro level factors.

Statement 2

- The 'medical model' is not appropriate for dealing with mental health problems (i.e. stress, burnout, depression).

Statement 3

- 'Push and pull' factors with respect to individual decision making concerning return to work are the same across Europe (national systems have a minor effect)

Question

- How can Disability Management strategies be applied to people with stress related disorders ?
